Wintering Chrysanthemums purchased in the fall is not a problem if you heed this.

Temperature is not the damaging factor — WATER IS. This list of Chrysanthemums is hardy in all zones of the U. S. Whether you heel into beds or plant into rows, just make sure that you will have no surplus water on your plants either in the winter or in the early spring. In the beds, be sure that the heeling soil is raised four or five inches above the contour of the area. In the field rows, raise a hill five inches above the aisle space first, then plant. That's all there is to it!

In the middle of this catalog we have inserted a handy order aid. It lists all of the Chrysanthemums as they occur in these pages. Just fill it in and your Chrysanthemum order is quickly and easily completed.

This book belongs to you. Consider the writings as your own. If there is anything in it that you would like to use, just go right ahead. No rights are reserved. If we can ever add anything that is helpful, please call on us.

Field grown mums used as stock for planting are far and away the most economical way to acquire the liberal quantities that create the display that sells. Your plants will be loaded with stolons. Consider each stolon a plant in the field next year. You can't buy your Chrysanthemums in any way, pots or rotted cuttings, and come close to the low cost of your own divisions from these field grown plants.

MOTHER NATURE APPROVES — PLANT THIS FALL

BE READY . . . For the Rush of Spring Sales Directly From Your Stock . . . For a Full Performance From Your Cut Flower Planting . . . Plants are slipped to dormancy — not starting a year's new growing system. That is the best conditioning for good arrival, speedy and successful transplanting without any necessary shock. Just tend to the drainage — winter water, not temperature is the killer — and you are using the season of LEAST risk.

Tradesmen are showing an increasing inclination to plant in the fall, and once it is given a fair trial, it becomes a wonderfully advantageous habit. Where, in the spring, the tradesman has barely more than a month and in it has to spare time from his most concentrated selling season, the Fall gives him September, October, November, and into December, four months of the more comfortable and leisurely Indian Summer. It is good for the plants, it is good for you . . . PLANT THIS FALL!
